ST. LOUIS--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Bunge (NYSE:BG), a global leader in agribusiness, food and ingredients, has more than 100 positions available for trainees and interns across North America. This will be the company's largest class of entry-level professionals to date in the region.

"This is an exciting time to begin a career at Bunge. Our teams are working on some of the world's most pressing challenges from implementing digital solutions to ensure food is delivered where it is needed most as efficiently and sustainably as possible, to collaborating with our customers to develop tailored solutions to meet the world's evolving nutrition needs," said Chrystiane Junqueira, Vice President, Interim Human Resources Lead. "Our people are our greatest asset, and we are looking for individuals who can bring their passion, talent and diverse thinking to continue to make us the most innovative and dynamic company in our industry," she continued.

Current college students pursuing an undergraduate career are encouraged to apply for Bunge's paid internship program which will begin in 2023. Available internships span focus areas including engineering, safety, finance, government affairs, human resources and trading and give participants real-world experience.

Candidates who currently hold a bachelor's degree are encouraged to apply for one of Bunge's trainee programs. Trainees typically undergo a 16-18-month, project-driven rotation and are assigned a Bunge mentor. Applicants willing to relocate for the program are preferred.

Along with providing professional growth and developmental opportunities for new employees, Bunge also offers flexibility and benefits to help employees balance personal and work life, and has been recognized repeatedly as a Most Loved Workplace®.
